

Conference Focus

Technical Surveillance Countermeasures (TSCM), is perhaps one of the fastest changing industries from a technological point of view, as technology advancements and new threats are identified on a daily basis. The lack of meaningful operational and professional standards, code of ethics, or mandatory certification, clearly outlines the necessity for such an important and long overdue professional development event here in Canada. Our conference serves two (2) primary objectives, by providing an educational component of professional skills development, and secondly by providing a networking opportunity for professional TSCM operators, equipment manufacturers, and the end user clients that are responsible for implementing formal Technical Security (TS), Communication Security (COMSEC), and Technical Surveillance Countermeasures (TSCM) programs within the government or corporate sector they represent.

Professional Development Opportunity

Our conference theme and focus on the educational component and professional development, suggest that networking is the key to meeting these important aims, goals, and objectives. This unique opportunity to network with a dedicated group of Technical Security professionals, exhibitors, government agency personnel, private sector TSCM service providers, and a variety of end user clients, will ensure that our objectives are met during this years Canadian Technical Security Conference (CTSC).
